The Tempering
Howard Swazey Buck 1939

The Tempering Years—Barbara Rebik 2011-12-01 The decade of The Civil War—a period fraught with strife, romance, greed, espionage, and disaster. More than any other era these words mold our nation. The Tempering Years follows Nathaniel, a seminary student, who leaves school to begin his real education in the Union army.

The Tempering of Men
Buck Howard Swazey 2013-06-26 A sequel to "A Companion of Wolves" finds a new pack formed by Isolfr and his sister, the Konigenwolf Viradechtis, threatened by a rivalry between its two war leaders, a situation that is complicated by an invading army of humans.

The Tempering of Russia—Ilya Ehrenburg 2017-07-11 A seeing picture of the real ordeals Russia has undertaken, and of the heroism that compared the German invaders. “Sober Russia’s most noted contemporary journalist has called for American readers some of the more colorful passages in which he described the Nazi-invasion of his homeland. His prose is fiery, his hate for the Germans is intense, and his love for Russia and her people is boundless.”—Foreign Affairs

The Tempering
Gloria Skurzynski 1983 The summer of 1911 is a decisive one for three young men in a Pennsylvania steel town as they find and lose jobs, fall in love, and begin to shape their adult lives.

The Tempering
Howard Swazey Buck 2015-01-09 There behind him a log-cabin breathed smokily through its mud-daubed chimney; a pioneer habitation in every crude line and characteristic. On the door hung, drying, the odorous pelt of a "varmint." Against the wall leaned a rickety spinning wheel. To all that, which he hated, he kept his stiff back turned, but his ears had no defence against the cracked falsetto of an aged voice crooning a ballad that the pioneers had brought across the ridges from tide-water ... a ballad whose phrasing was quaintly redolent of antiquity.

The Water of Life—Michael Meade 2006-10-01 At once a mythic journey, a study in depth psychology, and a treatise on initiation, The Water of Life addresses the roots of conflict, the recurring hunger for war, and the underlying need to return culture to its mythic context. Telling stories drawn from many cultures, Meade's genius relies on the power of myth and the surprising gift of mythic imagination for solutions to the new threats and age-old dilemmas that increasingly plague humankind. Original.

The Optimization of the Tempering Process for a Pork Belly Product on the Basis of Physical Property Simulation - Shengyue Shan 2019 For both cylindrical and rectangular products, and products of different dimensions, time-to-temper is shorter when tempered in water flow than in air flow. The time-to-temper can be significantly reduced when the convective heat transfer coefficient is between 10 and 50 W/(m²·K). The time-to-temper does not change linearly in accordance with the change in product dimensions. The ambient temperature that is close to the product’s freezing point will lead to the longest time-to-temper.
